

Revoke Your CommuniCare Consent to Share Information

CommuniCare is an Opt In service and individuals can removed their consent to share and participate at any time. You may revoke your written or verbal consent to share your information by emailing or mailing your request to the address below. This will be effective for future uses and releases of your protected information. Your client record will be inaccessible, and participants will no longer be able to see your information in the CommuniCare electronic platform. However, it is important to note that revoking will not be effective for information that we have used in the past to a referral partner prior to the receipt of this written notice. For example, of your name and address were provided six months ago as part of a referral, that information may be still with the partner it was shared with at the time. CommuniCare will continue to store and use your information internally for business purposes such as auditing, evaluation, training and quality improvement.

Revocation does not adversely affect any future services, referrals or resources provided by any participant agency.

I hereby revoke collection and use of all my personal information in CommuniCare. I understand I can opt back into CommuniCare at any time.
